

2025 Yearbook

The APEA is a UK based organisation, drawing membership from all quarters of the petroleum industry, including Regulators from National and Local Government Authorities, Oil Companies, Equipment Manufacturers and Suppliers, Service and Installation Organisations, Training Establishments and many others. It is seen to be unique in representing all sides of the industry and in providing a forum for debate and the generation of technical guidance.

The APEA was founded in 1958. Some 30 petroleum-licensing enthusiasts started the Association in the West Midlands and their objectives still hold true today:

- The advancement of scientific and technical knowledge
- The supply and interchange of information
- Uniformity of standards interpretation and application

Today the organisation has over 1100 members spread across many countries all over the world. In the UK and Europe we encourage organisation of branches. Currently there are eight branches in the UK.

Members receive a quarterly magazine The Bulletin and also this combined desk diary/Yearbook free of charge. The association also publishes technical guidance, runs training courses covering a wide range of subjects, provides technical advice and runs APEA Live, the industry conference, exhibition and awards dinner.

If you would like to know more about the activities of the APEA or membership, please contact the Association Business Manager:

The APEA

The Association's Aims and Objectives

The aims and objectives of the Association for Petroleum & Explosives Administration have remained unchanged since the foundation of the organisation in 1958, principally these are:-

- The advancement of scientific, technical and legal knowledge required in the administration of the Petroleum & Explosives Acts and associated Environment legislation
- To facilitate the interchange of information, ideas and practices on all matters pertaining to Petroleum & Explosives and associated Environment legislation
- To attain, so far as is practicable, uniformity in the administration of this legislation
- To establish the formation of branches in the United Kingdom and other countries
- To co-operate with other bodies having similar objectives to those of the Association, to act as an authoritative body for consulting with government, public bodies and others in matters of public, professional and scientific interest concerning petroleum, explosives and associated environmental law

APEA Branches

APEA Branches have been established across most parts of the UK and Ireland, with a growing number of European and North American members. The Association's branches serve as the forum for members. Contact details for branch secretaries are provided in each copy of the APEA's magazine, The Bulletin and on the APEA website at www.afea.org.uk.

The Bulletin

This is the quarterly magazine, published by the Association and is sent free to all members. The Bulletin includes news, press releases, features of technical and legal interest, covering all aspects of petroleum and explosives and training and branch information. The Bulletin provides a forum for technical, legal, safety and some-times controversial matters.

General Information

The Association comprises Individual Members, Corporate Members, Fellows, Honorary Members, and Retired Members. The APEA is managed by the National Council which consists of Officers of the Association, four people elected from the Membership, and representatives from local branches.

The APEA has grown rapidly and continues to gain strength and recognition in its field of work. The APEA Business Manager is the first point of contact for day to day enquiries and can be contacted at admin@afea.org.uk or on + 44 (0) 345 603 5507. Information is also available on the APEA website at www.afea.org.uk.

The APEA is a company Limited by Guarantee.

APEA Events

APEA Live, the best 24 hours on the trade calendar, a specialist annual event for the petroleum industry, incorporating an Exhibition, Conference and Awards Dinner, all in one fantastic day. This event is usually held in October or November of each year. Detailed information is available at www.afea.org.uk or please contact the APEA Business Manager at admin@afea.org.uk.

In addition to this event your Branch will hold Branch meetings during the year at various locations. This is an opportunity for members to meet fellow branch members and provide the means whereby members can exchange information, knowledge and experience as well as providing a platform for speakers from members of the Association, industry, government departments and elsewhere.

Foreword

Welcome to the 2025 Yearbook and diary. It is as always a comprehensive guide full of contact information and references for many of our industries stakeholders; including the regulatory, technical, supply and retail sectors. It is a useful tool for your business or profession and can easily be used as a point of reference when seeking contact information to suit the needs of your business. Our APEA website is also a good source of information where contact details can be sourced, copies of our quarterly magazine The Bulletin can be downloaded, and technical articles and updates can be reviewed.

The work of APEA continues on through our local branch network and through National Council. Over the past year our local branches continue to meet up (usually bi-annually) where they enjoy short discussions/presentations on industry specific topics. Our local branch network is the lifeblood of our organisation and they would be delighted to hear from people interested in joining up or indeed presenting to them on an innovative industry related topic.

The Blue Book is our industry's technical guidance document which provides technical and detailed information on the design, construction, modification, maintenance and decommissioning of filling stations. The recent development of the new 5th Edition of the Blue Book was a major undertaking where the entire document was updated by working groups set up by APEA National Council. They reviewed and accounted for the evolution/changes that have occurred in our industry since the last review in 2018. The Blue Book is also used for technical guidance in many countries around the world, particularly throughout Europe. Please note that while the Blue Book makes references to UK legislation, local legislation and guidance should always be used where applicable.

APEA continues to provide technical guidance and information to our industry through our Technical Committee and our website. All technical questions and queries submitted to the Technical Committee through the APEA website will receive a comprehensive and detailed response. Our various training courses continue to be the benchmark for our industry's training requirements as they cover a wide range of the technical and safety areas relative to the industry. The training courses continue to be well attended both at home and overseas; and online training course options are available and also continue to evolve.

As our industry is constantly changing our Association continues to be nimble footed and keep up with the changes as they occur. The changes in future fuels continues and is inclusive of many fuelling alternatives. It's difficult to forecast anything other than that the alternative fuels seem to be developing on many different fronts. As there doesn't seem to be any silver bullet solution to the move away from fossil fuels, the future is likely to be a combination of many of the alternatives relative to the suitability of their use.

I look forward to meeting everyone at our annual conference and flagship event APEA Live in Milton Keynes on the 14th November 2024. The workshops, open forum discussions, exhibitions and the trade area are always very interesting as they are reflective of the evolution of the industry.

Finally, I would like to thank to all our advertisers and members for the contributions they make to our organisation and our industry.

Michael O'Connell
APEA Chairman

SYSTEM 3M
Next generation Standalone Outdoor Payment Terminals Featuring Online Authorisation Technology

Reknowned throughout the industry for it's solid, robust and what many call bullet proof construction.

The System 3M was developed specifically as a fuelcard payment terminal for the truck stop market providing 24-7 automated fuelling.

Communicating with MCS's custom developed, cloud based Fuel Management Software, transactions and wet stock movements are displayed in real-time and accessible from any web enabled PC, Tablet or Smart Phone.

The 3M is also available with various local account software and tools that can be set-up to accept the fuel cards of your choice. The terminals are fully approved for resale and are ideal for environments such as Forecourts, Truckstops, Airports and Marinas.

Enhanced Security Measures

Peace of Mind...
MCS Cloud systems monitor your terminal 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Every event is logged and any problems flagged up via regular status reports. Comprehensive diagnostic tools allow MCS to monitor and make adjustments online. Alternatively ask your engineer to contact MCS with details.

At your fingertips...
The Cloud systems working in association with the terminal offer total control of single or multiple home depot fuelling locations, real-time reports, update and alerts at your finger tips.

Other key features included:

- Online reporting packages - transaction, card provider/ISO and stock reports in various formats including Excel and PDF.
- Online stock management with tank gauges linked directly into terminal and through to the MCS associated cloud software.
- Monitor live transactions against recored dip readings.
- Analyse data across a range of dates, times, ISO numbers and pumps to simplify the reconciliation process.
- Protection from environmental issues - System highlights if stock levels change without a transaction taking place.

Product Description

Gasolines are complex mixtures of volatile hydrocarbons distilling between approximately 30°C and 220°C and consisting of compounds in the C4 to C12 range. They are produced by blending refinery streams to meet the required performance specifications. Many gasolines in Europe also contain blending components of non-petroleum origin, especially oxygenates (mainly ethers and alcohols), and additives may be used to boost certain performance features. Lead alkyls can be used to meet octane requirements, but an increasing proportion of gasolines are now 'unleaded'.

For regulatory purposes, the position of gasoline is complex. There is an entry in EINECS for 'Gasoline', but this describes a substance consisting purely of hydrocarbons. This has the following definition:

EINECS No. 289-220-8, CAS No. 86290-81-5

Gasoline.

A complex combination of hydrocarbons consisting primarily of paraffins, cycloparaffins, aromatic and olefinic hydrocarbons having carbon numbers predominantly greater than C3 and boiling in the range 30°C to 260°C (86°F to 500°F).

Thus, the hydrocarbon component of a gasoline, being in EINECS, can be considered as a substance, even though it is usually produced by blending together several refinery streams. However, the addition of performance additives and oxygenates means that marketed gasolines are preparations and have to be dealt with on a case-by-case basis.

The composition of the hydrocarbon component of a gasoline can vary widely depending on the type and nature of the crude processed, the refinery processes available, the process conditions, the overall balance of demand between gasoline and the other refinery products, and the product specifications. The refinery streams most commonly used are derived from the following sources:

1. crude distillation (naphtha)
2. alkylation, isomerization and solvent refining
3. cracking (hydrogenation, catalytic, thermal and steam)
4. catalytic reforming
5. hydrotreating
6. Oxygenates (MTBE, TAME etc)

EINECS lists a number of different refinery streams from the above sources and these are identified in Appendix 1A-1G of CONCAWE product dossier No 92/103.

The main contents of this section deal primarily with the hydrocarbon content of gasoline as defined by the EINECS entry, although general comments are included concerning the use of additives and oxygenates.

Hydrocarbon Components

The composition of gasoline is variable and depends on the ranges of blending components which may be used.

Current motor gasolines are generally blends of reformate catalytically and/or thermally cracked streams, isomerates and straight run gasoline.

Aviation gasolines are predominantly alkylates (obtained by combining C4 and C5 isoparaffins with C3, C4 and C5 olefins) with the possible addition of more aromatic components including toluene. The normal ranges of hydrocarbon types (determined by ASTM test method D1319) in commercial gasoline are indicated overleaf:

Table 1 Normal ranges for hydrocarbons types in gasoline

Hydrocarbon type		Motor gasoline	Aviation gasoline
Paraffins	(% vol)	30-90	75-100
Cycloparaffins (Naphthenes)	(% vol)	1-35	0-1
Aromatics	(% vol)	5-55	0-25
Olefins	(% vol)	0-20

The paraffin fraction includes n-hexane, generally no more than 5% vol and typically 1-2% vol.

The aromatics fraction contains benzene. From a review of extensive analytical data from 16 countries over the 1986 to 1988 period, CONCAWE estimated an overall average benzene content in motor gasoline of 2.6% vol. Unleaded premium gasoline (95 RON) had a slightly higher average benzene content of about 3.3% vol. The benzene content in aviation gasoline consisting only of alkylate will be close to zero, but may range up to 3% vol when other refinery streams are used.

Oxygenates

Oxygenated compounds, mainly methyl tertiary-butyl ether (MTBE), but also including methanol, ethanol, and tertiary-butyl alcohol (TBA) are often blended with gasoline hydrocarbons to increase octane numbers. Some European gasolines already contain oxygenates and their use is likely to increase.

Properties of Petroleum

The use of oxygenates in gasolines is covered by an EC directive which specifies two sets of maximum levels. The first set gives maximum concentrations which member states must permit. The second provides maximum concentrations (usually higher) which member states may permit under national legislation without the gasoline being considered as a special fuel requiring labelling as oxygenated fuel on service station pumps. In this second set, a maximum oxygen content of 3.7% wt is specified. Limits for individual oxygenates which must also not be exceeded include: methanol 3% vol; ethanol 5% vol; TBA 7% vol; and MTBE 15% OXYGENATES

Additives

Additives used in gaseolines include the following types: anti-knock agents (octane improvers), anti-oxidants, corrosion inhibitors, metal de-activators, combustion chamber scavengers, inlet system detergents, carburettor anti-icing compounds and dyes. In general, low concentrations well below 0.1% wt are used. The specific identity of additives is proprietary information of the individual supplier.

An exception to the proprietary nature of additives is the common use in leaded gasolines over many years of tetra-alkyl lead compounds as octane improvers in conjunction with ethylene halogenides as lead scavengers. Lead levels have been reduced in motor gasolines over recent years and do not now normally exceed 0.15g/l, corresponding to 0.03% wt of tetra-ethyl lead with 0.02% wt of ethylene halgenide. Aviation gasolines usually contain higher levels of lead at 0.56 or 0.85g/l, corresponding to 0.12 and 0.19% wt of tetra-ethyl lead with 0.07 or 0.11% wt of scavenger. It should be noted that there is an EC directive which specifies an upper limit of 0.013g/l lead content for unleaded gasolines.
